TO DRAW

It is becoming increasingly the custom for wealthy American sportsmen and women, too, to reside in England during the fox hunting season, and there are obvious reasons why the bulk of them select Melton Mowbray or the immediate neighborhood as their place of abode. Melton is situated in the center of the finest hunting country in the world, and is, accordingly, the most convenient place for those sufficiently endowed with this world's goods who wish to enjoy the

For this reason Melton's long-established claim to the title of the hunting metropolis cannot be questioned. There are, of course, numerous other hunting centers with their stretches of good country, but there is always a reverse side to the picture in the form of plow or woodland, or of some undesirable nature which detracts from the pleasure of those who ride to hounds. Providing a man is well mounted and his heart is in the right to those of Mr. Cochran, and contain place, it is possible anywhere within a ten-mile radius of Melton to follow the pack without ever having to turn aside. Few who have ridden over this | America. happy hunting ground would change their sphere for choice, so long as their nerves remained unimpaired.

To extract the utmost pleasure out of Leicestershire hunting it is absolutely necessary to purchase the very best horses that money can buy, otherwise it is almost impossible to keep one's place in the front rank when the hounds run fast. Then there is no other hunting center which affords such variety, for every week throughout the season it is possible to hunt six days a week with one or other of four of the leading packs in the country, namely, the Quorn, Belvoir, Cotesmore, or Mr. Fernie's. On five out of the six days the fixtures are within easy distance of Melton, but on Thursdays it is generally necessary to go further afield in search of sport, though in these days of swift running Mann, one of Canada's big men-in Devonshire, England, in a dragnet. motorcars, with convenient trains for boxing horses, a journey of from 12 to 16 miles into Mr. Fernie's domains does not entail much ahrdship. Another thing which perhaps in no small measure adds to the glamour surrounding Leicestershire is that one there meets the creme de la creme of English society. The fact that it is necessary to subscribe to three or four dif-

TIRED OF CORN-FIELD PEAS.

Several prominent ladies of the confederacy have, in the last few years, given to the public their reminscences of the bitter tragedy, the often intermingled comedy, and the ingenious makeshifts of their life in war-time. Now Eliza Frances Andrews, in "The War-Time Journal of a Georgia Girl," adds another worthy volume to the list. She shows, in her record of the domestic hardships and deprivations with which the southern omen had to wrestle, the same gallant mirthfulness as her predecessors. Many of the hardships she scarcely minded, but her soul sickened at cornfield peas.

"Ham and corn-field peas for dinner one day, and corn-field peas and ham the next," she lamented. "Mother does her best by making Emily give us every variation on peas that was ever heard of. One day we have pea soup, another pea croquettes, then baked peas and ham, and so on through the whole gamut, but alas! they are corn-field peas still, and often not enough of even those."

"The table generally looks well enough when we first sit down," she recorded again, "but when we get up it is as bare as Jack Sprat's. We have some good laughs at the makeshifts we resort to for making things hold out. We eat as little as we can do with, ourselves, but we don't want father's guests to suspect we are stinted, so Metta pretends to a loss of appetite, while I profess a great fondness for whatever happens to be most abundant, which is always sure to be corn-field peas or some other coarse, rank thing that I detest. It would all be very funny if it were not so mortifying, with all these charming people in the house that deserve to be entertained like princes and are used to everything nice.

"Metta's delicate appetite and my affection for corn-field peas are a standing joke between us. She has the best of it, though, for she simply starves, while I 'nawsierate,' as Charity says. I make a face at a bag of peas whenever I go near it in the pantry."

The Doctor and the Dog. A family that lives in a detached house out in the Bronx telephoned for their doctor. The call was urgent. It was late in the evening.

When the doctor arrived at the gate the family dog was there ahead of him. The dog did not like the looks of a man with a triangle shaped bunch of whiskers and plack satchel.

The doctor started to brush by the dog and go in. But the dog soon showed him that he wasn't joking. "Maybe they'll hear the dog and eall him off," thought the doctor, and he waited. But they didn't. There was just one thing for the doctor to do, and that was to go to the nearest telephone and call up the family. But he learned that it was no easy job to find a telephone. It was then pretty late, and he had to go half a dozen blocks back toward town before he found a place where he could get a 'phone.

Lakeside hospital is probably Samuel Mather's chiefest hobby.

If there is a deficit in the hospital finances at the end of the year Mr. Mather is usually only too happy to write out a check that will more than make it up.

This has gone on from year to year until whenever anything is broken or damaged about the place the nurses and other employes look upon the loss as just that much out of Mr. Mather's generous pocket. If a nurse drops a saucer she will smile and remark: "Poor Samuel!" Among many of the nurses the remark is almost a byword whenever anything goes wrong. Not long ago, so runs the story,

Mr. Mather was at the hospital visiting a member of his family who was He was unfortunate enough to lean against a vase of flowers on a table. The vase fell to the floor and broke.

"For several years my husband was a missionary in the Southwest. Every one in that high and dry atmosphere has more or less trouble with dandruff and my daughter's scalp became so encrusted with it that I was alarmed for fear she would lose all her hair. After trying various remedies, in desperation I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuti-cura Ointment. They left the scalp beautifully clean and free from dandruff, and I am happy to say that the Cuticura Remedies were a complete success. I have also used successfully the Cuticura Remedies for so-called 'milk-crust' on baby's head. Cuticura is a blessing. Mrs. J. A. Darling, 310 Fifth St., Carthage, Ohio, Jan. 20, 1908."

Medical Practitioner Ranks High In Scale of Humanity.

To know a medical practitioner is to know one who is superior to the average educated man. Few professions, perhaps no other, develop so much of character. The occupation of healing and the necessity of beholding men and women and children at their worst, irritable, unreasoning, and often cowardly, has not, fortunately, caused his own degeneration. His capacity for thoughtfulness is trained to keenness, his selfishness, where there is any, is shrewdly hidden, and the human instinct for enjoyment is none the less in him because of his knowledge of its reactions.

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?"

Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Red Banks, Miss. - "Words are inadequate to express what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from a female disease and weakness which the doctors said was caused by a fibroid tumor, and I commenced to think there was no help for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman after all other means had failed. My friends are all asking what has helped me so much, and I gladly recommend Lydia E. The doctors told me I never would be well without an operation, but Lydia E.
